

There's something about this place and I think most of us feel it.

It's the way people show up. Neighbours helping neighbours, people checking in, and a strong sense of community that's always been here.

Perth-Andover has had its challenges over the years, but what stands out most is how people come together through it all.

About four years ago, I took over what many of you knew as Grant's Service Centre - now Shaw's Service Centre. Running the shop has given me the chance to get to know so many people in this community and hear what matters to you.

My wife and I are also raising our family here, so this is home for us.

I care about where this community is headed - supporting local businesses, keeping that strong sense of community, and making sure our village is a place people feel proud of, both in how it looks and how it feels.

That's why I've decided to run for council.

If you feel the same, I'd really appreciate your support.

Voting day is May 11th.
